5. Avoiding Pitfalls: Security for Portable Computing and Media Devices

Notebook computers, USB flash drives, and other removable media devices are often used outside a secure network environment, which makes them particularly susceptible to loss. As a result, extra care needs to be taken to protect the devices and any “not public” data contained on them.

All computers should be secured with a strong password. To protect both the data and the computer equipment, the following security measures should also be considered:

- Government data should not be stored on personal computers, personal USB flash drives, and other similar personal equipment.
- “Not public” data should be stored on a notebook computer or removable media device only when there is a business need.
- Data stored on a notebook computer or a removable media device should be strongly encrypted.
When removable media are no longer in use, they should be securely destroyed.
When disposing of computers, the hard drives should be securely erased.
Cable locks should be used for all computers, except while in transit.
Computers should never be left in an unattended vehicle.

The State of Minnesota's Information Technology organization, MN.IT Services, has a number of resources on their website for governmental entities who are drafting security policies for portable computing and media devices. To view this material, go to:
